The Lynndale park takes a small area and packs it with a lot of features. While the flow is non-existent, the elements in the park can be sessioned one at a time to get warmed up. The highlight is a low ledge to high drop or the steeper flat bank hip. The quarter pipe and adjacent bank to curb set up offer some different combinations you won't find in too many other parks. If you get confused, watch the locals. They rip this place apart.

Marysville

The Marysville park is amazing. Designed with input from locals and Frank Hirata, this street style park includes a step up curb cut, 3 up/3 down set, long double set, killer pyramid and ledge combos, plus a monster 9 stair rail. This looks like a competition style street course and the great flow offers street dogs terrific variety. While the pool sharks might want to pass on this one, it is a fantastic street destination for the tech flippers. You could bang out your whole video part in this place if you needed to.
